levels is a huge advantage as existing teams typically dislike change and often have a vested interest in the status quo. Therefore, the ability to strike the right chemistry — first with the owners, and then the team below — is very critical.

has a hidden agenda, which is not compatible with theirs.

is compatible with a family owned business and you have the right competencies the rewards can be huge. It is not for everyone, so be very careful. However, it is critical for you to remember that it is most important to strike the right chemistry with the owners, which means understanding their idiosyncrasies and adapting to them and their mindset.

 Good people/relationship skills:

Candidates with excellent people/relationship skills tend to do well as it is very important that they be liked by people. Otherwise, there is a tendency for the candidate not to be accepted and supported. The ability to strike a rapport at all

 Ability to work hard and sincerely:

As owners are generally very hard-working, they tend to lose confidence in a candidate wanting a good work-life balance. They like to see the same degree of passion and intensity in a candidate that they themselves exhibit. At the same time, they respect candidates who work with sincerity and feel a love and a sense of belonging to the organisation. They can discern very fast if the candidate

 Respect for their values/culture/ecosystem:

Finally, it is very important that the candidate respects the values of the company. Generally, the ecosystem is simple, informal, straightforward, unstructured with high result- and bottom line-orientation. Decision-making is fast, and promotions & rewards can be fast if the candidate is a performing one. Risk-taking capacity is high, as can be financial rewards as there are a number of candidates whose remuneration package has more than doubled in 2-3 years, which does not generally happen in an MNC, with stocks as an additional gain. Therefore, if your DNA

For the promoters of family-owned business, it is very important to understand the candidate's DNA and whether that is compatible, recruiting the candidate based only on skills and competencies can lead to a mis-hiring, which is both painful as well as frightfully expensive. Designed to work

Is your workplace high on aesthetics? Or does your workstation intimidate you? We throw light on the importance of a modern, well designed workspace

Anisha.Sahijwala@timesgroup.com

In a day and age when professionals spend most of their time at work, it is important for organisations to design their workplace to suit the needs of employees. Workplace interiors speak of the organisation. And with an increasing number of companies cost-cutting, this potential branding tool is being sidetracked. Abhinav Shetty, an interior designer explains, "The designing of a workplace should be planned with the occupants in mind. Basic design elements include access to daylight, exterior views, and open design concepts that encourage multipurpose meeting areas. A well designed workplace can help make the most of available space, yet motivate employees to give their best. When a potential client walks into your space, they should immediately understand your business focus and philosophy." Here are tips that will help you design your workplace:

Space counts
Since professionals spend most of their time at work, it is important for them to enjoy their workspace. Most organisations, to save resources, tend to over-use the office place. "Every employee must be given their space. The space between my desk and the neighbouring desk is less than a foot. While we make sure we put in our best, we need our privacy, too. With so many employees made to work in a limited space, the office looks cluttered as well," says IT professional Sanaya Dhar.

Storage matters
Every workstation in an office must have a dedicated storage unit. While most companies believe that documents can now be stored online, many employees yet vouch for the importance of a dedicated storage unit. Explains Sumit Bhatia, a CA by profession, "Storage space is absolutely essential - irrespective of the work profile. Our company makes sure we make the best of technology as well as the infrastructure to keep our official documents secure. Apart from storing documents, these storage units are used to keep certain personal necessities handy."

"Storage space is important since it cuts the cost of leasing a space. Ample workstation storage also helps keep a tab on your work profile. A dedicated storage space also improves efficiency," shares Shetty.

Cabin cut
Thanks to innovative designs and revised HR policies, most companies today have done away with cabins. Except for senior management personnel, most offices now encourage open work stations to save space, and encourage interactivity. Elaborates Shetty, "With property prices increasing, providing cabins to most professionals is expensive. Multiple cabins require larger work space, extra expenses, made-to-order furniture, cost of installation of ventilation, electric, acoustic systems, etc. Besides these, open workstations encourage team building and employee-boss rapport."

Theme thought
Workplace interiors speak a lot about the organisation, the brands, its products and what its focus is. And the most recent trend is to have a themed workplace. For example, a website designing firm will have their office designed keeping their work profile and company product in mind.

Enhance the value of your ad

Not advertising the right way can result in losing out on a potential customer. This is why The Times of India brings T.I.M.E. (Times Interact Mobile Enhancer). It's a simple way in which your potential customers can view what you're selling so they can make the right decision. All they have to do is:

- SMS the <T.I.M.E. code> to 88 26262626
- They'll receive a link via text
- They can then view 3 pictures and/or a video of your advertised products/services.

To know more, call 9022700300. Go ahead, it's time to interact.

British High Commission
New Delhi

The British High Commission invites applications for the position of Head of Chevening Scholarships Team - C5 (L)

An exciting new opportunity to lead the UK's Chevening Scholarship Scheme (India), based in New Delhi.

Our Chevening Scholarship programme is expanding. Last year we sent over 55 scholars to the UK for fully funded programmes, and that number is set to increase again in 2014 - with funding of around Rs20 crore. We are looking for a highly talented individual to lead this programme, who can both shape the delivery of new and existing courses, as well as expand the programme further. The successful candidate should: be ambitious; have excellent management and financial skills; strong personal impact skills; and have at least 7 years of relevant experience.

For job specification and further details, please visit our website www.gov.uk/world/india Closing date for receiving applications is 24th February 2014. (Only online applications with job application form and statement of suitability will be accepted). No hard copies please.
